Reason: Zhao Miao, the director of many documentaries, combined the style of his life experience with two elements – feature and commerce – to create a story movie based on an original idea. The leading role was performed by a child actor, a real Down’s syndrome sufferer. Layer by layer, he’s peeling off contradictions and disputes that surround him and at the end unveils the main theme of “love”. So he wants this film to show all of people include young audience under 18.

Synopsis

Zhao Miao, the director of many documentaries, combined the style of his life experience with two elements – feature and commerce – to create a story movie based on an original idea. The leading role was performed by a child actor, a real Down’s syndrome sufferer. Layer by layer, he’s peeling off contradictions and disputes that surround him and at the end unveils the main theme of “love”.

Stubborn grandmother Luo with her disabled son Tai Ning and grandson Dongdong live together in poverty. The grandmother who has an incurable disease and who wishes to leave this world in peace made an agreement to bring a simple-minded Chun Lian to enter her family in order to substitute her in all the household work. Pitiful Chun Lian who has a son - Down’s syndrome sufferer Xiao Ban'r – marries into Luo family, thus joining two families together. From this point the destinies of each of the family members change drastically. What happens next becomes a life long unforgettable memory...

Synopsis

Chengdu, I Love You entangles two romance stories set in the Chinese city of Chengdu.

In the episode set in 2029, directed by Cui Jian and starring by Tan Weiwei and Huang Xuan, rock & roll meets Gongfu. The samba dancer Lin Miao has two wishes: the first is to find the boy who saved her in her childhood. The second is to track down the man who hurt her cousin. But she never expects them to be one and the same. How will she reconcile her love and hatred?

In the episode set in 1976, directed by Fruit Chan and starring by Anya and Guo Tao, the down-and-out young master of a tea-house falls in love with a beautiful waitress. The long-spouted teapot nurtures both the tradition of tea art and their love as well. But this love is doomed to be fruitless in that special time.

Reason: The film takes on an unique art style through the smooth transfer between two different time and space in the film. The conversation between Linlin under the ruins and her mother on the ruins strides across the line of life and death, showing the greatest love between mom and daughter.

Synopsis

On 12th, May 2008, a disastrous earthquake of 8 magnitude changed the history of China. In Beichuan Middle School, a girl named Linlin gave up her life in order to save her classmate Yuanyuan. She was buried by the collapsed teaching building. She made us so touched when she was confronted with death. The film "Mom, Don't Cry" explores the unique inner and spiritual world of the middle school students when they struggled with death by showing the experiences of the girl Linlin and her classmates who were buried in the ruins after the disaster happened.

This is the first film which shows the middle school students struggling for life after the earthquake happened in Wenchuan. The film is also the first one to bring us into the unique inner world of the young group in a very special period.

Synopsis

In July 1937, the nation-wide Anti-Japan War broke out. When the Xin Kou Battle broke out in October, the 769th Regiment of the 129th Division of the Eighth Route Army received the task to move up to the Yan Menguan which is the enemy's rear area to hold down the Japanese reinforcements which were marching towards Xin Kou. It could cooperate with our troops on the frontal battlefield. In the morning of October 19th, 1937, the 769th Regiment under the Regimental Commander Chen Xilian made a sudden surprise attack on the Japanese army's Yang Mingbao Airfield on the south of the Dai County in the Shan Xi Province. More than 600 warriors of this regiment dashed into the airfield to fight hand-to-hand against the Japanese invaders. In the about one-hour-long fierce battle, these warriors of the 769th Regiment blew up all the 24 fighter planes at the airfield, and killed more than 200 invaders. The commander of the 3rd Battalion of the 769th Regiment Zhao Dali and about 100 warriors sacrificed their lives for our nation.

With several spoiled guns and small cannons Chen Xilian led these warriors destroyed the Japanese army's airfield unexpectedly. During about 10 days after this victory, our defenders in Xin Kou and Tai Yuan had never been bombed by the Japanese plains any more. This victory of night attack on the Ming Yangbao Airfield is a classic example from our army's military history of a weak force defeating a strong force, which went through the whole battle front like hurricane and greatly lifted Chinese Nation's spirits of the War of Resistance.

Synopsis

A lone man runs desperately around a deserted mountain village. He stumbles upon a burial pit overflowing with the charred corpses of dozens of executed villagers. The only remaining sign of life is a clumsy, large Dutch dairy cow. He remembers how he came to know this foreign cow ...

In winter 1940, approaching enemy Japanese troops force the villagers to prepare for evacuation. Unfortunately, their special cow, which supplies milk for wounded soldiers, is too big to easily hide. After drawing lots, a man named Niu becomes responsible for the task of protecting the valuable cow. As an incentive to do the job well, the village chief grants him marriage to spunky young widow Jiu ...

Although now his fellow villagers have all been massacred, Niu remains committed to protecting the cow. Before he can leave the destroyed village, Japanese troops arrive and discover the noisy cow. Niu escapes into the mountains alone, but returns because of his promise. While trying to rescue the cow, he is captured by the Japanese. Moments before Niu is executed, a battle breaks out when local forces arrive. Niu manages to sneak the cow away amid the fighting.

From this moment on, the relationship between Niu and the cow deepens into true tender affection. But their struggles are far from over. A group of starving refugees will abuse the cow's generous milk-giving, and the greedy will even try to slaughter the cow for meat. Although he outsmarts them and finally manages to escape to the mountains with the cow, loyal Niu will still have to fight troublesome soldiers and bandits. He will eventually put his own life completely on the line for the cow, unaware that the cow itself is capable of returning the life saving gesture ...
